A climate law like the Zero Carbon Act is important because...	all the experts tell us we must act immediately or the world will face environmental and therefore economic and geo-political chaos. There is no other option but to radically change the way we think about transport, housing, waste, our economy etc. This is more than our Nuclear Free Moment - it is even more serious than that...
Long-term target	I support the most ambitious target of reducing total greenhouse gases to net zero by 2050. I also support taking a science-based approach to ensure our efforts to reduce emissions are as impactful as possible: we should aim for negative levels of long-lived gases, while reducing short-lived gases to sustainable levels. This target should be reached by reducing our own emissions and not by using international carbon credits. Future governments should not be able to reverse decisions unless the independent Climate Commission okays the changes.
Climate Commission	I support the establishment of an independent Climate Commission that is made up of experts and provides advice, but does not make final decisions. Future governments should not be able to reverse decisions unless the independent Climate Commission okays the changes.
Adaptation	I support a plan for adaptation being included in the Zero Carbon Act.
Climate justice	A Zero Carbon Act must be just and fair in that it ensures a just transition for workers and communities.
Further comments	Please act boldly - this will be painful and expensive but we are all doomed if governments and societies do not accept we need to change our habits and economies. The benefits of taking extreme action now will be huge - our green tourism industry will take off even more, the air will be cleaner and people will be healthier.
